Benvenuti al Piccolo! Green tour of the island of trees Michele Dell'Utri

30 October - 22 December 2024 | Teatro Strehler, Milano, Italy

'Benvenuti al Piccolo!' is a historical format of the Piccolo Teatro di Milano dedicated to the youngest audience. Green tour of the island of trees follows this idea of 'theatrical weaning', integrating it with the objective of developing 'concrete actions to stimulate good practices'.

Colouring itself (symbolically and not only) with green, and electing the island of trees as its destination, the visit to the Strehler Theatre branches out into a new path that enriches the articulated catalogue of initiatives dedicated by the Piccolo to the valorisation of a culture of sustainability in dialogue with the city community, in particular with the universe of young people.

The path taken and its landing exalts the strength of the relationship and of a civilisation of 'us', showing how there is no such thing as an isolated form of life and claiming the need to establish a harmonious relationship with nature in the sign of a precise awareness: we are not the owners or masters of the planet but, at most, just humble guardians.

After all, as we read in the book Once Upon a Time in the Woods. Trees tell the story of climate change. Will a plant save us?, 'Man's life is linked to that of trees and, even if we do not realise it, we share their same destiny: if they are fragile, so are we, fragile men on a sick Earth. And it is from this marvellous Earth, buffeted by unfamiliar winds, that the trees send us a final warning. Will we know how to listen to them?'
